

ROCHESTER

College Club Reception.

Though Pluvius threatened — and not idly either, as occasional down-pours of rain testified—the members of the College Club successfully held their reception and masque in honor of the girls who are preparing for university. The guests were welcomed at the home of Mrs. W. F. Frear, on Punahou street, Mrs. Arthur Alexander, Mrs. Wallace Farrington and Mrs. Wilbur MacNeil being in the receiving line. After an informal reception, the company repaired to the adjoining grounds of the Alexander home where the masque was held. This was given under the tree next to an old vine-clad wall. It was a truly sylvan scene—the flower dotted vines, the gnarled old trees, soft green grass—a fitting background to the pretty masque which was enacted. This was an allegory entitled "Motherhood," written by a Wellesley undergraduate and arranged and staged by Mr. James Wilder. The principal parts of the angel and the mother were taken by Mrs. W. F. Frear and Mrs. Charles Loomis who showed considerable sympathy and cleverness in their interpretation. They were assisted by four little tots, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Forbes, Rev. and Mrs. John Erdman and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Dyer.

After the play, refreshments were served on the lawn of the Frear residence. Miss Florence Lee and Miss Charlotte Hall presided over the chocolate urns, others assisting being Miss Ruth Shaw, Miss Alice Oleson, Miss Susan Clark, Miss Maude Martin and Miss Margaret Peterson. Among those noticed at the reception were Mrs. Arthur Alexander, Mrs. Wallace Farrington, Mrs. Wilbur MacNeil, Mrs. Ballow, Mrs. A. A. Eberole, Mrs. D. Scudder, Mrs. Gaylord Church, Miss Florence Lee, Mrs. Lee, Miss Maude Martin, Miss Charlotte Dodge, Miss Mary Winne, Miss Susan Clark, Miss Alice Oleson, Miss M. Yoder, Miss van Schaick, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Gaynor, Miss A. C. Hobdy, Miss Harriet Needham, Mrs. W. Bryan, Misses Bravham. It is said of a certain tea that took place recently where excellent music, of a high class was furnished that the babble of voices was so great that no one could hear the music even if she felt so inclined—it did not seem to occur to many of the ladies to stop their chatter to listen to anything more melodious.

That society folk of mainland cities are ever so much more daring in their dress than Honolulu would dream of, is frequently brought to our minds by descriptions of gowns worn by women known to us in the big cities. For instance there is Mrs. Templeton Crocker, formerly Helene Irwin, who really belongs to Hawaii as much as San Francisco. We all know the fair Helene, by sight at any rate, and are moved to wonder, when we reflect upon her extreme height and thinness that she could dare a costume that would inspire the following account.

Mrs. Crocker continually reminds one of the sylph-like damozels illustrating the de luxe Rubiyai, young Persian maidens, high-spirited, ever so slender, and quick and graceful.

On this occasion Mrs. Crocker wore

The question of brass buttons has been settled satisfactorily at last. No longer need the civilian youths utter bitter innuendos concerning the effect of military wearing apparel on the fair sex. No longer, in fact, need there be any distinction at all—the national guard offers the solution, the national guard with its natty brown and crisp white uniforms of service and parade which at a distance (and even close at hand to the inexperienced) look exactly like any other army uniform. To do and dare means to join and wear—not that we desire to write poetry at all. It has been done at many affairs of late and the effect has been tremendous. We feel sure that this subtle point must have escaped the authorities or they never would have failed to list it among the other numerous advantages when they advertised for volunteers.

Many Honoluluans were interested to learn of the brief visit of Lieutenant and Mrs. John Ellis at this port when the transport passed through this week. Mrs. Ellis was formerly Miss Daphne Carr who, with her mother, Mrs. Shadwell Carr of London, visited in Honolulu for seven or eight months last year they left for the Orient, continuing their leisurely trip around the world. Miss Carr was married to Lieutenant John Ellis a few weeks ago after a most romantic courtship at Fort Monroe. The young couple will make their home for the next few years in the Philippines.

Major and Mrs. Timberlake of Fort Ruger will leave on the March transport for their new post in New York. They will travel via the southern route, stopping to visit in California, Arizona and New Mexico.

Lieut. and Mrs. G. F. Humbert of Fort Ruger were hosts at a charming dish supper on Sunday last for Lieut. and Mrs. W. Reed, Lieut. and Mrs. H. F. Nichols, Miss Florence Hoffman and Mr. Joan Macaulay.

The Misses Frances and Charlotte Gillett entertained charmingly at tea this week for Mrs. Emerson of Detroit, who, with her husband, is visiting Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Emerson of this city.

Mrs. A. H. Tarleton gave a delightful little tea on Monday afternoon in honor of Miss Payne of San Jose, who is visiting in Honolulu as the guest of Mrs. Jessica Pascoe.

Mr. and Mrs. James Wilder entertained at dinner on Monday in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Grant, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Brown and Mrs. H. L. Smith.

Lieut. and Mrs. Frederick Barker have given up their cottage on Beretania street and moved to their quarters in the new Fort Shafter cantonment.

Mrs. James D. Kennedy, whose marriage to James D. Kennedy, manager of the San Francisco office of the Inter-Island Steam Navigation Company and son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Kennedy of this city, was recently solemnized. Mrs. Kennedy was Miss Collia Chataud of San Francisco.

ters in the new Fort Shafter cantonment.
